Abstract

The purpose of this research is to find out and understand the importance of the role of leadership in an organization in utilizing existing factors, both supporting and inhibiting factors. So that it can provide an overview of the actions of a leader in dealing with problems that occur in the organization. The research method uses a type of qualitative research in the form of data in the form of statements and pictures or the type of data produced is descriptive. Data collection includes primary data by conducting interviews and direct observation, and secondary data in the form of related literature. Data analysis in this study used an interactive method which included activities: data reduction, data presentation, and drawing conclusions. The results of this study illustrate that in general the leadership in the Senaken Health Center carried out by the Head of the Health Center is good enough to be measured through the dimensions of leadership which include: leadership as an innovator, communicator, motivator, and controller, although there are still obstacles in its implementation which From a controller standpoint, it still needs to be improved and paid attention to, especially in controlling its employees.
