Similarity Report - Reducing Similarity Required

Dear Authors,

For your convenience, we have generated a similarity report using Cross Check, a widely used anti-plagiarism system. Cross Check is specifically designed for editors and publishers. The similarity index for your situation is 20%. According to the standard guidelines, the similarity index should be at least 10% and not exceed this threshold. If your index is higher, it indicates that you need to make modifications to your article within the next thirty days.

Please exercise caution when using the Cross-Check function, as it not only identifies exact word-for-word matches from other publications but also detects similarities in paraphrased lines. In some cases, the system may highlight specific words or phrases by italicizing or underlining them, indicating that the sentence is too similar to the source and needs to be changed.

Please be aware that you can only access the summary report (PDF attachment), while the Editorial Board has access to the sources within the system. Therefore, it is important to carefully review and update your article to ensure compliance.

We adhere to international publishing standards to combat dishonesty. If plagiarism is detected after the second report for the revised article, we, as the Editorial Board, will notify your university. This is only applicable if the text needs to be aligned with the required standards. Thank you for your understanding.

Best regards,
Secretariat of PJMS

Dear Authors,

I would like to express my sincere gratitude for your contribution to the upcoming edition of PJMS. Please refer to the PDF files that our DTP specialist has created as proofs of your article. We kindly request that you prepare the author's corrections to the provided proofs within the next few days. Once the final DTP is completed, the number of pages will be adjusted after all the articles' adjustments have been made.

When making corrections, please be as specific as possible. Use the yellow highlighter to indicate the spots where changes need to be made. Clearly indicate which words should be added and their placement when adding missing comments. Please provide detailed instructions, such as changing "Old text" to "New text."

At the end of the article, under the "Author's" section, please ensure that the following information is included: your full postal address (including university name, postal address, country, and email address), as well as your ORCID number. If there are multiple authors, please specify the relative contributions of each author.

I am grateful for your understanding and cooperation. Please note that at this stage, only required and minor changes can be made. We can only make modifications in the event of a major issue. We are unable to make changes to the text itself or the formatting of minor details.

Thank you for your understanding.

Warmest regards,
